

1. From pursuing electrical engineering from Osmania University to becoming the CEO of Reliance power, your journey is really motivating. It would be great if you could elaborate upon it and guide our young management enthusiasts about how to start their corporate careers.
2. What according to you are the qualities that a successful leader should possess and how to develop these qualities?
3. What is your favourite project that you have ever worked on or the best moment that you have had in your corporate life of more than 35 years?
4. Behind every successful person, there's a role model that has inspired them to achieve big. Who is that one person you look up to for inspiration or mentorship?
5. What's the most important risk you took in your professional life and why?
6. Any words of wisdom or advice for the young people out there ready to start their professional lives?